

Engels on the Growth of Industry and the Crisis of Overproduction

In the most advanced industrial countries we have subdued the forces of nature and pressed them into the service of mankind;

we have thereby infinitely multiplied production, so that a child now produces more than a hundred adults previously did.

Increasing overwork and increasing misery of the masses, and every ten years a great collapse.

Friedrich Engels,
Dialectics of Nature

Original article

2023-12-31

"In the most advanced industrial countries we have subdued the forces of nature and pressed them into the service of mankind; we have thereby infinitely multiplied production, so that a child now produces more than a hundred adults previously did. Increasing overwork and increasing misery of the masses, and every ten years a great collapse."

Friedrich Engels, Dialectics of Nature

Original article