

Lenin on War

+
“ War is a continuation of policy by other means.

>
All wars are inseparable from the political systems that engender them. The policy which a given state, a given class within that state, pursued for a long time before the war is inevitably continued by that same class during the war, the form of action alone being changed.

+
- Vladimir Lenin,
War and Revolution

POLIT

>

US.POLITSTURM.COM

01 +

+ +

+

lenin

STURM + |

+

|

>

Original article

2021-01-13

more

War is a continuation of policy by other means. All wars are inseparable from the political systems that engender them. The policy which a given state, a given class within that state, pursued for a long time before the war is inevitably continued by that same class during the war, the form of action alone being changed.

Vladimir Lenin, "War and Revolution"

Original article