

Marx on Increasing Labor Productivity and Reducing the Cost of Labor

Hence there is immanent in capital an inclination and constant tendency, to heighten the productiveness of labour, in order to cheapen commodities, and by such cheapening to cheapen the labourer himself.

Karl Marx,
Capital Vol. 1

Original article

2024-01-21

"Hence there is immanent in capital an inclination and constant tendency, to heighten the productiveness of labour, in order to cheapen commodities, and by such cheapening to cheapen the labourer himself."

Karl Marx, Capital Vol. 1

Original article