

Marx on the Immediate Struggle as the National Struggle

It is altogether self-evident that, to be able to fight at all, the working class must organize itself at home as a class and that its own country is the immediate arena of its struggle insofar as its class struggle is national, not in substance, but as the Communist Manifesto says, 'in form'.

Karl Marx,
Critique of the
Gotha Program

Original article

2024-08-03

"It is altogether self-evident that, to be able to fight at all, the working class must organize itself at home as a class and that its own country is the immediate arena of its struggle — insofar as its class struggle is national, not in substance, but, as the Communist Manifesto says, 'in form'."

Karl Marx, Critique of the Gotha Program

Original article