

Stalin on Self-Criticism as Strength

We have never been, and never will be, afraid of openly criticising ourselves and our mistakes before the whole Party. The strength of Bolshevism is precisely that it is not afraid of criticism and that, in criticising its defects, it acquires the energy for making further progress.

Joseph Stalin,
The Fifteenth Congress
of the C.P.S.U.(B.).

Original article

2026-05-16

We have never been, and never will be, afraid of openly criticising ourselves and our mistakes before the whole Party. The strength of Bolshevism is precisely that it is not afraid of criticism and that, in criticising its defects, it acquires the energy for making further progress.

Joseph Stalin, The Fifteenth Congress of the C.P.S.U.(B.)

Original article